‘Canada as safe haven? Documenting two generations of US war resister migrations ’

This talk draws on oral histories with US war resisters who migrated to Canada during US-led wars in Vietnam and Iraq. Although these two generations entered distinct political and legal landscapes in Canada and faced different outcomes in their quest for protection, there are important parallels in their histories and in the social movements they forged. This research prompts timely questions about what kind of safe haven Canada has been historically and might continue to be for people migrating from the United States for political and legal security.

Alison Mountz is a geography professor and Canada Research Chair in Global Migration at the Balsillie School of International Affairs at Wilfrid Laurier University. Her monograph, Seeking Asylum: Human Smuggling and Bureaucracy at the Border (U of Minnesota) was awarded the Meridian Book Prize from the Association of American Geographers. She has a new book out in 2018 – Boats, Borders, and Bases: Race, the Cold War, and the Rise of Migration Detention in the United States (U of California, with Jenna Loyd), and another forthcoming: The Enforcement Archipelago: Hidden Geographies and the Death of Asylum (U of Minnesota). Mountz directs WLU's International Migration Research Centre, edits the journal Politics & Space, and is a member of the College of the Royal Society of Canada.
